Acknowledgements

The researchers would like to sincerely thank the county elections officials and staff throughout the State of California who took time to provide data to the project. Additionally, we are grateful to the Secretary of State's Office for its continuing support and interest in this project. Without their assistance, the completion of these yearly reviews and the California Elections Data Archive would not be possible.

CALIFORNIA ELECTIONS DATA ARCHIVE

INTRODUCTION

The California Elections Data Archive (CEDA) is a joint project of the Center for California Studies and the Institute for Social Research, at the California State University, Sacramento and the office of the California Secretary of State. The purpose of CEDA is to provide researchers, citizens, public agencies and other interested parties with a single repository of local election data. With over 6,000 local jurisdictions in California, the task of monitoring local elections is nearly impossible for individuals. CEDA addresses this problem through the creation of a single, cost-effective and easily accessible source of local election data. CEDA includes candidate and ballot measure results for county, city, community college, and school district elections throughout the State. CEDA thus represents the only comprehensive repository of local election results in California and one of a very few such databases on local elections in the U.S.

How the CEDA Data is Collected and Reported

Election data are collected periodically throughout each calendar year. This enables CEDA to incorporate results from special elections as well as all regularly scheduled elections. Election results from counties, cities, and community college and school districts are entered in the CEDA database from which three standard CEDA reports are generated. These reports include:

- County Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elected county offices; vote totals and text for county ballot measures.
- City Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elected city offices; vote totals and text for all city ballot measures.
- Community College and School District Elections: Candidates, ballot designations, and vote totals for all elective community college and school district offices; vote totals and text for all district ballot measures.

Ballot measures for all jurisdictions are coded according to type (e.g., charter amendment, taxes, bond measure, initiative, etc.) and to topic (e.g., education, public safety, governance, etc.).

THE CEDA PARTNERSHIP

THE CENTER FOR CALIFORNIA STUDIES

Located at California State University, Sacramento, the Center for California Studies is a public policy, public service and curricular support unit of the California State University. The Center's location in the state Capital and its ability to draw upon the resources of the entire State University system give it a unique capacity for making contributions to public policy development and the public life of California. Center programs cover four broad areas: administration of the nationally known Assembly, Senate, Executive, and Judicial Administration Fellowship Programs; university-state government liaison and applied policy research; civic education and community service through forums, conferences and issue dialogues; and curricular support activity in the interdisciplinary field of California Studies.

INSTITUTE FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH

Established in 1989, the Institute for Social Research (ISR) is a multidisciplinary institute that is committed to advancing the understanding of the social world through applied research. The Institute offers research expertise and technical assistance serving as a resource to agencies, organizations, the University and the broader community. Services provided by the Institute include research and sampling design, measurement, coding and data entry, computer assisted telephone and field interviewing, mailed and Internet surveys, focus groups, data base management, statistical analysis and report production. ISR has completed numerous projects with more than 50 federal, state and community agencies, several private firms and many administrative units of the university. Faculty affiliates of the Institute offer specific content expertise in a wide variety of disciplines, including the social sciences, health and human services, engineering and education.

CALIFORNIA SECRETARY OF STATE

The Secretary of State is, among other duties, California's chief elections officer with the responsibility of administering the provisions of the Elections Code. The Secretary must compile state election returns and issue certificates of election to winning candidates; compile the returns and certify the results of initiative and referendum elections; certify acts delayed by referendum, and prepare and file a statement of vote. Recent legislation permits but does not mandate that the Secretary of State compile local election results.

TRENDS IN LOCAL ELECTIONS: 1995-2012

CEDA now encompasses 18 years of election data, including four gubernatorial election years (1998, 2002, 2006, and 2010), four presidential elections (1996, 2000, 2004, 2008, and 2012) and nine odd-numbered years devoted to local races. The 2012 election had 530 local ballot measures and 5,208 candidates in races for local offices. This report begins with an overview of some of the multi-year election trends then continues to a discussion of the 2012 contests.

BALLOT MEASURE TRENDS

Each year, California voters are asked to consider a number of governance issues and to choose among candidates vying for public office. Within local elections, there appear to be consistent features at all local election levels across elections over the 18 years of CEDA data collection. Other election characteristics seem to vary considerably from year to year, however. This variation is particularly noticeable between on-year (even-year) and off-year (odd-year) election cycles. The following section summarizes the patterns and trends seen in local elections during the 18 years of CEDA data collection.

Trends in the Number, Types, and Topics of Local Election Measures

As noted in previous reports, there is a clear trend with the number of local ballot measures offered to voters “piggy-backing” on state and national elections. On average, there were approximately two and one-half (2 ½) times as many ballot measures in even-years (601) as odd-years (236). The percentage of ballot measures passing increased by five percent compared to the previous even year election in 2010. Passing percent for ballot measures increased from 67 in 2010 to 72 percent in 2012; but the overall percentage of ballot measures passing increased slightly from 63 to 64 percent.

- Among all the various types of ballot measures, charter amendments continued to have the largest percentage of measures passed, with more than three-quarters (76%) of charter amendment measures passing during the 18-year period. Recalls are the second highest percent passing among all measure types at 71 percent. Recalls were closely followed by bond measures with two-thirds (68%) passing. However, during the past 18 years, recall measures only constitute four percent of all measures, whereas bonds constitute slightly more than one-quarter (26%) of all measures. After bonds, passage rates for the other types of measures were as follows; ordinances (61%), taxes (56%), and initiatives (49%; See Trend Table A).
- Across the three government levels at which data is collected—county, city and school district—cities see the largest average yearly number of ballot measures (204; 50%), followed by the school district (140; 34%) and county (66; 16%). However, following the trend of previous years, school districts had the largest percentage of measures passing (68%), followed by cities (64%) and counties (57%; See Trend Table A).
- Figure 1 displays the trends for ballot measures and the percent of measures passing from 1995-2012. As can be seen in the green trend line representing the number of measures (See Figure 1), the actual number of ballot measures cyclically varies substantially between odd and even years; however, the dashed green trend line in the figure reveals a slight downward trend in the number of measures over the period. By contrast, the orange line representing the percentage of measures passed shows much more stability over time and the dashed trend line reveals a movement toward an increased percentage of measures passed during this timeframe. Thus, while we're seeing a jagged trend toward slightly fewer measures, we're also witnessing a gradual increase in the percentage of those measures passing.

During the 18 years of CEDA data collection, the number of ballot measures in even-years peaked in 2004 with 712 measures. The current 2012 election saw 530 measures; an increase over the unusually low number of 482 seen in the last even-year, 2010. Interestingly, the passage rate for the 2012 elections cycle was 72 percent, which is the second highest pass rate in the 18 years of data collection; it is eleven points above the average for odd-year elections and eight points higher than the passage rate of measures overall.

- Among the eight topic areas for local ballot measures, education issues continue to be the most common ballot measure area, with slightly more than one-third (34%) of all measures between 1995 and 2012 focused on this topic. Education measures occurred at twice the rate in even versus odd-year election cycles. The number of education measures has exceeded the number of measures dealing with other specific topics. (See Trend Table B).
- Earlier years' data have been re-coded to capture revenue measures. With this revision, revenue represents 13 percent of the total ballot measures in local elections. In the 2009 election cycle revenue measures jumped to 29 percent of local election ballot measures, an increase from the mid-teens seen in the previous two years. In 2012, revenue represented 21 percent of all measures, rebounding from the low of seven percent seen in 2011 (See Trend Table B).

- In 2012, among all county measures, revenue issues accounted for about 24 percent; but among city measures, revenue accounted for about 33 percent of measure topics.
- Between 1995 and 2012, 63 percent of revenue measures passed. However, over three-quarters (79%) of revenue measures passed in 2012. The 2012 passing rate for revenue measures is second only to the 2001 election cycle, where 87 percent of all revenue measures passed.

Figure 2 provides an overview of the average (mean) number of local ballot measures and the percent of those measures that passed in each of eight topic areas for the past 18 years (1995-2012). Interestingly, with the exception of general services measures, the rank ordering of the most frequent ballot topic areas (education, governance, revenue, land use, public safety, public facilities, and transportation) and the rank ordering of the passing rates for ballot measures by topic area (governance, education, revenue, land use, public safety, transportation, and public facilities) is nearly parallel. That is, the most frequent topics of measures are also the topics that pass most frequently.

Figure 2: Average Number of Local Ballot Measures per Year and Percent Passing by Topic for the Past 18 Years

- The level of ballot measures also appeared to have little overall impact on the passing rate for various governmental levels. County measures continue to show the lowest passing rate at 57 percent overall, with school district measures having the best passing rate at 68 percent (See Trend Table B).

- As reflected in previous reports, county measures showed the greatest disparity in passing rates between odd and even-year elections, faring much better in odd-year elections. County elections witnessed a 16 percent higher passing rate for tax propositions, a 39 percent higher passing rate for recall measures, and an 18 percent higher passing rate for bond proposals in odd-years versus even-years (See Trend Table A).
- Among the six most common types of county ballot measures identified in the CEDA data, charter amendments, recalls and bonds had the highest pass rates, at 76 percent, 71 percent and 68 percent respectively; initiatives and taxes had the lowest pass rates, with 50 percent and 44 percent passing (See Trend Table A).

Trends in Bond and Tax Measures

Bonds and tax measures each make up slightly more than one-quarter of all measures, at 26 and 29 percent respectively, and a little more than one-half (55%) of all ballot measures over the 18 years of election results tracked by CEDA. Ordinances and charter amendments, affecting policy shifts in local government, constituted another one-third (34%). Initiatives and recalls continue to account for only six percent of total local ballot measures (See Trend Table A).

- The overall percentage of local measures devoted to taxes during the past 18 years has been gradually trending upward. However, the percentage of tax measures decreased from 44 percent in 2011 to 34 percent in 2012, 17 percent below its all-time high of 51 percent in 2009 (See Figure 3).

- School districts remain responsible for the vast majority of bonds placed before voters—about 93 percent over 18 years of data collection. Bonds continue to make up slightly less than three-quarters (71%) of the six most common types of measures in school district elections.
- In the 18 years that CEDA has been collecting data, bond measures had much higher rates of passage than did tax measures. With the 2012 election, the average pass rate for bonds remained unchanged, approximately twelve percent above taxes at 68 and 56 percent respectively.

- Another trend observed during 18 years of CEDA data collection is that pass rates for tax measures are consistently higher in odd-years than in even-years—an average of 61 percent in odd-years compared with 51 percent for even-years. As noted above with regard to general pass rates, counties saw the biggest differences between pass rates for taxes in odd versus even-years, with an average pass rate of 56 percent in odd-years and 40 percent in even years. The discrepancy for odd and even-years decreased slightly for cities with the 2012 election—an average 62 percent pass rate in odd-years and a 55 percent pass rate in even-years. Tax measures for school districts also pass at higher rates in odd versus even-years. Through 2012, school districts pass, on average, 53 percent of tax measures in even-years and 62 percent in odd-years (See Trend Table A).
- On the other hand, on average, pass rates for bond measures appear better in even-years than in odd-years (70% vs. 61% respectively). However, while bond measures are considerably more likely to pass in even-years versus odd-years in cities (61% vs. 52%) and in school districts (71% vs. 61%), they are more likely to pass in odd-years rather than even-years in counties (75% vs. 57% respectively; See Trend Table A).

Trends in Community Services Districts and County Service Areas Measures

Community Service Districts (CSDs) and County Service Areas (CSAs) were introduced just before the turn of the new century as an accommodation to the tax restrictions posed by Proposition 13. Portions of a county could form a special district and agree to tax themselves to provide services that the larger county population as a whole might not support. CEDA began tracking community service district ballot measures in 1998. Despite considerable fluctuation in the number of CSD/CSA measures during the subsequent 15-year period, speculation that the number would increase over time has not been supported by the trend data. In fact, the overall trend has been a sizeable decrease in the number of measures between 1998 and 2012 (See the dashed trend line in Figure 4 below).

- As discussed in previous trend summaries, one important question is whether CSD/CSA measures lose effectiveness in terms of their passage rate as they become a larger percentage of all county measures. This year's data provides additional information to consider in this question. First, although the percentage of measures for CSDs/CSAs varied up and down since the 2005 election, the overall trend since 2006 has been downward—essentially these measures are accounting for a smaller and smaller percentage of all county measures. The 2012 percentage of CSD/CSA measures is the lowest percentage seen since 2002, when CSD/CSA measure also represented 18 percent of county measures. The percentage of these measures and their passage rates seem to be synchronized (except for 2003 and 2007; See Figure 5 below).

Figure 5: CSD/CSA Measures as a Percentage of All County Measures and Percentage of CSD/CSA Measures Passing, 1998-2012

- In the 15 years of CEDA data on CSD/CSA elections (1998-2012), 301 ballot measures have presented CSD/CSA issues across all 58 counties. However, use of CSD/CSA measures varied widely among these counties. Eight counties accounted for over two-thirds (70%) of CSD/CSA-related measures—Contra Costa (25), El Dorado (43), Kern (17), Marin (45), Riverside (20), San Diego (20), San Luis Obispo (21) and Siskiyou (13). By contrast, 47 counties have had five or fewer CSD/CSA measures on their ballots during the 15-year period (See Trend Table C).
- In the years since their inception, the principal type of CSD/CSA measure has involved taxes (210; 70%). Interestingly, another funding mechanism, bond measures, has only appeared as CSD/CSA proposals five times (2% of the total measures). After taxes, ordinances (31; 10%) and Gann Limit issues (29; 9%) comprised a distant second and third in terms of prevalence on the ballot. Recalls (21), bonds (5) and advisory measures (6) together only accounted for about ten percent of the total number of measures during the 15-year period (See Trend Table D).
 - During the 15 years since their inception, CSD/CSA-related tax measures were passed slightly less than one-half (47%) of the time. As with other tax related ballot measures, CSD/CSA measures in this area were more apt to pass in the odd-year elections

(59% pass) and more apt to fail in even-years (61% fail). Including this most recent year (2012) of data, CSDs/CSAs have slightly higher passage rates for tax measures than counties, 47 and 44 percent respectively. On the other hand, over the same 15 years, cities and school districts have enjoyed greater success with these measures, each with a 61 percent passage rate (See Figure 6).

Figure 6: Tax Measures and Percent Passing for Selected Years (1998-2012)* by Jurisdiction

*CEDA Data for collection for CSDs/CSAs started in 1998. County, City and School Districts tax measure data restricted to the 1998-2012 for the comparison with CSDs/CSAs.

- When CSD/CSA measures are separated out from all county measures, non-CSD/CSA and CSD/CSA measures passed at nearly identical rates of 59 and 58 percent. However, CSDs/CSAs did much better than other county measures when the ballot measure involved taxes. Non-CSD/CSA county tax measures had a 45 percent pass rate, while CSD/CSA tax measures enjoyed a 47 percent passage rate (See Trend Table E).
- Public safety remains the most common focus of CSD/CSA measures, comprising slightly less than one-third of all measures (96 of 302 measures; 32%). Governance (40) was the second most prevalent focus of CSD/CSA ballot measures, followed by revenue (39), general services (38), public facilities (34), transportation (33), environment (6), and land use (5) measures.
 - It is interesting to note that there were no governance measures in the first two years that CSDs/CSAs tracking was initiated (1998-99), but governance has appeared as a CSD/CSA issue in every election since then. Transportation measures were absent in 2011 for only the third time since 1998, and for the first time since 2003. Public facilities measures have appeared in all but five years (1999, 2003, 2008, 2010, and 2011). By contrast, land use, which also did not appear as CSD/CSA measures in 1998, has only appeared in three elections, 2000, 2005, and 2012. Similarly, environment measures have only appeared on CSD/CSA ballots during two election cycles, and have not appeared since 1999 (See Trend Table F).

CANDIDATE TRENDS

The addition of the 2012 data reinforces previous findings that stable patterns have emerged with regard to the number of candidates seeking offices, and distribution of candidates across the various local offices that are tracked.

- The total number of candidates for local offices (county boards of supervisors, other county offices, city councils, and local school boards) has consistently been more than twice as high in even-numbered as opposed to odd-numbered years (See Trend Table G).
- In the 18 years of CEDA data collection, school district candidates have comprised just under one half (47%) of all candidates for local offices. As might be expected given the raw number of offices at various levels of local government, candidates for city offices comprise 39 percent of the local candidates, while the smallest percentage of local election candidates reflects those seeking county offices (about 14%).
- In the even-year elections, city candidates and school district candidates were fairly similar in terms of the number of candidates. However, with the exception of the 2011 election, school district candidates have the largest number of candidates in the off-year election cycles where they make up more than half of the candidates on the ballot (See Trend Table G).
 - In all prior odd-year elections, the number of candidates for school boards was higher than the number of candidates for city offices. However, in 2011, candidates for school board contests reached their lowest level in the 18 years of CEDA and falling four candidates below the number of city candidates (730 and 734, respectively).
 - On average, the percentage of candidates running for county offices in even-years was approximately three times the percentage of candidates running for county offices in odd-years. County candidates averaged 17 percent of all local election candidates in even-years, but comprised only six percent of the candidates in odd-years (See Trend Table G).
- Over the 18 years of data collection, county candidates made up about 14 percent of all candidates in local elections (See Trend Table H).
 - Among candidates for county offices, 37 percent were running for county supervisor positions, while 23 percent were seeking CSD/CSA seats.
- On average, during the 18 years of CEDA data collection, slightly less than one-third (32%) of all candidates for local offices were incumbents (See Trend Table I).
 - Thirty-four percent (34%) of those seeking school district seats were incumbents.
 - Twenty-six percent (26%) of those seeking city council positions were incumbents.

- Twenty-eight percent (28%) of those seeking county supervisor seats were incumbents. However, with the exception of 1997 (5 races) and 2011 (1 race); there are typically no races for county supervisor in odd-year elections (See Trend Table I).
- During the 18 year period, four out of every five (80%) incumbents running for reelection at the city, county, and school district levels won their respective offices (See Figure 5 and Trend Table I).
 - Eighty-three percent (83%) of incumbent county supervisors¹ won reelection.
 - Seventy-nine percent (79%) of incumbent city council office holders won their elections.
 - Seventy-seven percent (77%) of incumbent school district candidates won their elections (See Trend Table I).
- In local elections, during the past 18 years, a little more than half (53%) of winning candidates were incumbents. This means that the local political arena is seeing a fresh mixture of individuals comprising local elected offices and bodies, with each election cycle. Conversely, this also suggests that fears of control of these institutions by a group of long-term political incumbents may be overstated.
 - Sixty-one percent (61%) of winning candidates for county supervisor positions were incumbents when they were reelected.
 - Forty-nine percent (49%) of winning candidates for city council were incumbents when they were reelected.
 - Fifty-two percent (52%) of winning school district candidates were incumbents when they were reelected (See Trend Table I).

Figure 7: Percent of Local Contests Won and Lost by Incumbent Candidates

*Runoffs are excluded from totals.

2012 ELECTION DATA

2012 BALLOT MEASURES

Californians voted in local elections on eleven different occasions in 2012. In addition to the primary and general statewide elections on June 5th and November 6th, some local entities called additional elections during the year. Voters in the county of Los Angeles were called to the polls the most, with six elections between January and November. Taken together, a total of 530 county, city and school district ballot measures were presented to California voters in 2012. This is somewhat less than the even-year average of 582 measures. Of the 530 ballot measures in 2012, 382 measures (72%) were enacted which is seven percent higher than the average for even-year elections since CEDA began tracking this information in 1994. In fact, 2012 saw the second-highest even-year passage rate since CEDA began.

Tax measures comprised the largest share of all 2012 measures. Of 530 ballot measures, 178 were tax measures, representing 34 percent of all measures. Tax measures passed at a rate of 69 percent, which is the highest even-year pass rate since CEDA began recording this information. Taxes were an especially prominent theme in 2012 due to the presence of a statewide income and sales tax measure on the November ballot. Proposition 30 was a centerpiece of Governor Brown's effort to correct the state's long-term structural budget deficit; and during much of 2012 considerable focus was placed on the merits of tax increases. Proposition 30 passed with 55 percent of the vote.

In the 2012 election cycle, 178 tax measures were presented to California voters in 43 counties. Of these 43 counties, five (Alameda, Contra Costa, Los Angeles, San Mateo, and Santa Barbara) accounted for 57 percent of all tax measures. The number of tax measures does not seem to correlate, positively or negatively, with the number of tax measures passed in each county. For example, among the top five counties each presented voters with ten or more tax measures, and saw passage rates ranging from 90 percent (Santa Barbara) to 43 percent (Alameda). Meanwhile, of the 24 counties with one or two tax measures, 12 had pass rates of 100 percent, six had pass rates of 50 percent, and six had failure rates of 100 percent.

Other types of local measures in the 2012 election cycle included bonds (29% of all measures), ordinances (21%), charter amendments (10%), and recalls (3%). Passage rates for recalls and bonds were especially high at 93 percent and 81 percent, respectively.

The specific measures presented to local voters of course differed by jurisdiction, although there were some themes that characterized the 2012 elections. For example, there were a large number of sales tax measures framed as protecting or restoring local police and emergency services in response to earlier State budget cuts. A number of jurisdictions sought new revenue from new fees and taxes, such as efforts by Richmond and El Monte to tax sugar-sweetened beverages sold in their cities. Medical marijuana was another theme, with some jurisdictions (such as Palo Alto, Imperial Beach, and Solano) seeking to authorize new dispensaries while others (such as Kern County) seeking new restrictions, and still others (such as Needles) seeking to impose a new tax on medical marijuana sales. Other measures were more unique to the particular jurisdiction; such as San Francisco's measure calling for a plan to evaluate how to drain Hetch Hetchy Reservoir and identify replacement power and water sources for the city and county. Another example was Los Angeles County's effort to require adult film producers to require their actors to use condoms and participate in a blood-borne pathogen training course, among other requirements.

County Measures. In 2012 there were a total of 76 county ballot measures across 35 counties. Of the 76 county measures, 48 (63%) passed while 28 (37%) failed. Just over half (39) of the 76 county measures were tax measures, and another 20 were ordinances and ten were charter amendments. Only one bond measure, one recall measure, and two initiatives were on county ballots. The most common topic was governance, with 19 such measures appearing on county ballots.

City Measures. Voters cast ballots on 248 city measures of which 165 (67%) passed. The majority of city measures dealt with governance (89 measures or 47% of measures) and revenue (32 measures or 31% of measures). Common types of city measures were taxes (93 measures or 38% of all city measures) and ordinances (83 measures or 33% of city measures). There were also 12 city recall measures, which continues a trend of double-digit recall measures each of the past three years. The only such measure of the 12 to fail in 2012 was the attempted recall of Mayor John Huerta, Jr., of the city of Greenfield in Monterey County.

School District Measures. The year saw 206 school district ballot measures of which 168 (82%) were approved. This is the highest passage rate for school district measures since CEDA began tracking this figure. The average passage rate of such measures in even-numbered years is 68 percent. Bond measures accounted for 150 (73%) of the school district measures, and these had a passage rate of 83 percent. The high passage rate may in part reflect a statewide concern about the adequacy of funding for education, which was a key theme of the statewide Proposition 30 campaign. Interestingly, all of the 19 school district bond measures passed in Los Angeles County, although one of two school-related tax measures failed.

2012 CANDIDATE ELECTIONS

A total of 5,208 Californians ran for local elected office in 2012, which is fairly typical for even-number years since CEDA has been active. Candidate elections took place at all levels of local government: cities, counties, and school districts.

County Races. California counties generally elect their officials in even-numbered years. Counties elect five-member boards of supervisors (their four-year terms are staggered so not all seats are up each year) except the City and County of San Francisco (the boundaries of the City of San Francisco and the County of San Francisco are identical) which has an eleven member board. Counties also elect judges, sheriffs, clerks, district attorneys and members of the governing boards of community service districts (CSD), which are agencies of the county.

In 2012 counties held elections for 321 open seats. The most common of these were County Supervisor seats, accounting for 173 (54 percent) of the 321 contests. Most of the remaining contests were for CSD/CSA Director (105 seats), followed by Superior Court Judges (31) and District Attorneys (2).

Incumbent candidates won 75 percent of the races that they contested. However, less than half (46%) of the winning candidates were incumbents, partly reflecting the fact that many races did not have incumbents running. Moreover, incumbent candidates as a group performed worse than incumbent candidates in most of the earlier years tracked by CEDA.

City Races. California cities elected mayors, council members, treasurers, clerks, and a handful of other officials in 2012. A total of 2,332 candidates ran for all city races, which is the largest number of candidates in 18 years of CEDA data tracking.

By far the most common contests were races for city council, accounting for over three quarters of all races. A total of 1,858 candidates ran in 819 city council contests, including 12 recall contests.

Twenty-five percent (456) of all city council candidates were incumbents and 74 percent of all incumbents won. This ties with 1996 for the lowest incumbent success rate since CEDA tracking began. Incumbent candidates accounted for 41 percent of all winning candidates in city council elections for 2012. Other city contests included city clerk/city assessor, city treasurer, mayor, and city attorney. Of these contests, only 16 of 141 (11%) incumbent candidates lost.

School District Races. The 2012 election cycle included 2,100 candidates for school board elections. Of these, approximately 30 percent were incumbents. Of the 627 incumbents, 446 or 71 percent won, while 603 or 41 percent of non-incumbent candidates won. As a group, incumbents' success rate was the lowest since CEDA began tracking this data. In total, there were 1,049 school board seats filled in 2012. Incumbent candidates accounted for 446 (43 percent) of all winning candidates in school board contests

RECALL ELECTIONS

The California Constitution allows voters the possibility to remove a local elected official if a sufficient number of voters sign a recall petition and a majority approves the recall in a subsequent election. In 2012 Californians voted on 14 recalls: one member of the CSD Mountain House Board of Directors in San Joaquin County; two members of the Orange Cove City Council in Fresno County; the mayor and two members of the San Fernando city council in Los Angeles County; the mayor and two members of the Greenfield city council in Monterey County; three members of the Fullerton city council in Orange County; one member of the Shasta Lake city council in Shasta County; and one member of the Atwater Elementary School District in Merced County. Only the attempted recall of Greenfield Mayor John Huerta, Jr. failed to pass.
